

WANTS PUBLIC BATHS DREDGED AND IMPROVED

Hollinger Gets Approval of City Planning Commission for Expenditure of $30,000

Plans to improve the public bath by dredging the bathing place, and erecting a new two-story building were outlined today by Ben F. Hollinger, chairman of the committee on parks, schools and playgrounds from the supervisors.

Hollinger outlined his plans at the meeting of the city planning commission and had them sanctioned. He stated that he intends to bring the proposition before the supervisors by the end of the year when the budget of expense is prepared. As proposed in this preliminary suggestion the dredging will cost approximately $15,000, and the new building $15,000. Material taken from the dredging work will be used to level up places in Kapiolani park.

Modern in every detail, the new building will be constructed with a concrete base and the upper part will be of wood. Mr. Hollinger stated that the first story could be used as a rest room and the second story for dancing.

Planting in Thomas Square. Mr. Hollinger also asked the commission to consider the grounds at Thomas square with a view to planting new trees alternately with the old ones, as those which have been in the park for many years are beginning to show signs of dying before long. Many of them have been badly eaten by worms. The commission promised to investigate the matter.

Harry Murray, general manager of the city water department, submitted figures showing the amount of water that will be necessary to supply the Japanese fountain soon to be placed at Kapiolani park. The commission after a study of the figures decided to have a two-inch pipe on the fountain. Eight men and a laborer will be put to work next Monday planting mahoe, any trees from the experiment station in the curbed plots on Kalaheua avenue. Mrs. F. J. Lowrey will have supervision of the work.

Only one more meeting will be held this year owing to the press of extra work before the Christmas holidays. This meeting will be on next Monday and will be given over to a definite standing out of all the work so far started by the commission.

NEW ORDINANCE TO PUT STOP TO BAD FISH SALES

Inspection was made, and the number or quantity of each kind of fish or other marine product so inspected. Must Be Kept Clean.

The ordinance further provides that all vehicles, street stalls or stands shall be entirely proof from flies and other insects, and from dust and dirt. Ahia is heartily in favor of the recent campaign of inspection which the Anti-Tuberculosis League has held in restaurants of the city. He says that he is in favor of some means whereby men may be hired by the city to make daily inspections.

School children are in much danger from the Oriental fruit carts and stands he believes. In trips he has made to these different places located near the schools he has seen apples in the last stages of decay offered for sale cheap, and bought by the children, who favored getting quantity rather than quality.

"Bread sold at these places is also often unfit to eat," he says. "Just recently, for instance, I found a piece of bread a portion of a centipede that had been cooked in with it in the making. Yet hundreds of school children are allowed to run there at the noon recess, and with a hastily concocted glass of pink milk shake, wash down the noonday lunch."

NATIONAL GUARD MAKES SOLDIERLY SHOWING AT REVIEW BY GOVERNOR

Troops Show Effect of Hard Drilling and Efficient Handling as They Swing Past

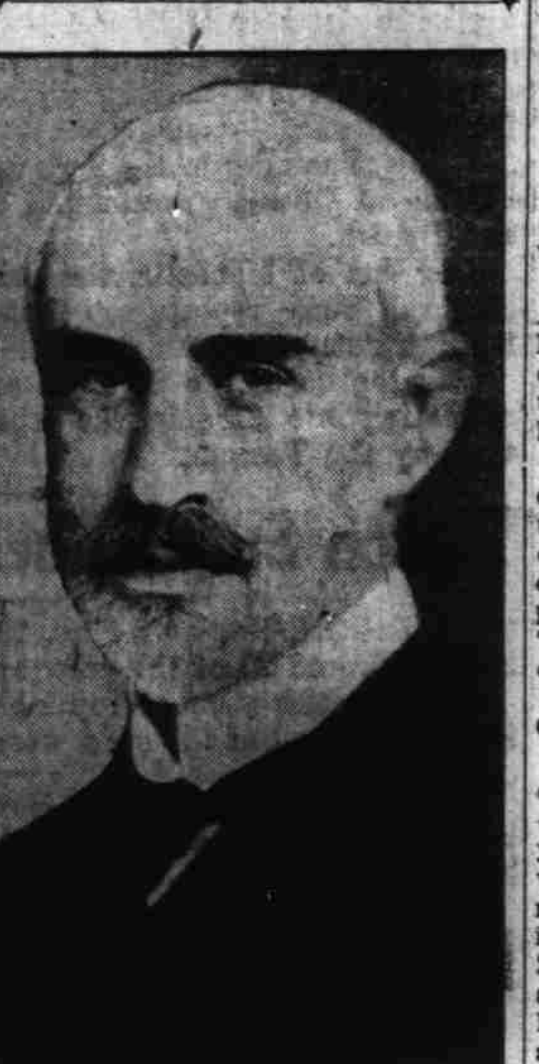

Troops of the 1st Infantry, National Guard of Hawaii, and attached Engineer troops made a splendid showing yesterday when reviewed by Governor Pinkham. General John W. Wisner, Hawaiian Department, and General Samuel L. Johnson, the adjutant general, were in the reviewing party. The officers passed along the line in an automobile, Lieut. Kimball, aide-de-camp to General Wisner, and S. Grant, Jr., being also in the car. The regiment in line and in double rank extended from the Opera House long Merchant street to the center of the city. There were 12 companies of infantry, one engineer company and the hospital corps detachment attached to the 1st Regiment for purposes of the review, and at the head of the line was the 1st Infantry band of 26 pieces.

Governor Pinkham and party returned to the reviewing stand after inspection, and the troops swung out to column of squads and marched back to the center of the city, passing the statue of Kamehameha and turning again into King street, and the reviewing stand in column of platoons. Richards street was packed with people and the guardsmen returned to the armory along Ala sea and then Hotel street.

People Thronged Route. Every part of the march was thronged with people. The sidewalks were lined all along the route, and the rows were especially dense in front of the reviewing stand in the capitol grounds.

The troops showed the effect of hard drilling and efficient instruction. They marched with precision, and there was no confusion. The nearest to a break occurred during the whole program of the day happened when a woman going Westward drove her car past the reviewing stand, forcing the band to turn out and threatening to break through the entire line of parade, breaking up the review formation. Major Rose saved the day by commanding his battalion to halt and hold their ground, until the car was backed up.

FIVE MORE BOYS MAKE ESCAPE AT REFORM SCHOOL

His name is G. Masake, and only the day before he had been returned to the school, after having been given his freedom.

Masake was found hiding in the underbrush and a systematic search of the neighborhood later resulted in the capture of another, whose name could not be understood, in a telephone conversation with Principal Tucker today. The boys still at liberty up to early this afternoon are Roy Pomeroy, James Hamaha and George Williams.

Principal Tucker believes that the escapes are planned by a few of the older boys and that most of the younger boys simply break and run when they see the older boys fleeing. A number of the larger lads implicated in the general outbreak of November 21 have been sent to jail. Saturday and yesterday the principal sent S. Maloi, K. Baker and D. Lopez to jail, and David Leleo and George Kahipa had already been taken there.

NEW BANKING LAW MAKING PANICS THINGS OF PAST

Alden Anderson, Coast Banker, Talks of Benefits of Measure at Commercial Club

Alden Anderson, president of the California National Bank of Sacramento, was the speaker at the Commercial Club luncheon today. Mr. Anderson, who is one of the directors of the San Francisco Reserve Bank, chose for his topic "The Federal Reserve Act and Its Result."

Opening his talk Mr. Alden said that the public should not look upon banks of the nation as private concerns, as the banks are the mediums of prosperity. He said that people look upon the postoffice and transportation companies as public institutions and should have the same feeling toward the banks, as they are under government supervision.

"In 1907 the people of the country were forced to a crisis," stated Mr. Anderson. "Conditions in all walks of life were changed and business was at a standstill. The banks worked together and issued paper that proved to be a medium of exchange that tide conditions over from a supposed panic to a normal state of affairs."

In touching upon the federal reserve law Mr. Anderson said that the large New York banks at first opposed the measure, but since its establishment they have found that conditions have improved. Many of the state banks were also opposed to the law but are gradually realizing that the Federal Reserve Act has brought about a condition that will improve the business of the country.

"When the matter of a banking system was first mentioned the federal government thought of establishing a central bank," he said. "This was found to be objectionable to many and it was finally decided to establish 12 reserve banks. When the bill was first introduced it was called the Aldrich-Freeland Bill. At present there are nine directors in each bank and there are 12 banks scattered throughout the country. Three of the directors must be identified with some bank. Three others are selected from outside the banking world, and three are appointed by the federal government."

"The head of the Federal Reserve Board consists of three ex-officio members of the government, the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture and the comptroller of the treasury. There is no politics mixed up in the board, as eight out of nine of the members in San Francisco are Republicans, and they were not picked out for political reasons."

"The reserve on deposit at the San Francisco bank exceeds the amount on deposit at the Bank of France by more than one million dollars. There are funds on hand now in the Federal bank at San Francisco amounting to $357,531,000 which proves that the system established is a success from every standpoint. We are hearing many good things about the system and with the array of banks organized as they are. We may have business depression, but we shall see no great panic under the present system."

At the speaker's table were a number of prominent businessmen including Herbert Fleishacker, president of the Anglo-London-Paris bank of San Francisco; L. Tenney Peck of the First National Bank of Honolulu; Dr. P. Frankenhimer of San Francisco; S. A. Wolf, manager of the Honolulu Yokohama Specie Bank; C. H. Cooke of the Bank of Hawaii; W. F. Frear, E. I. Spaulding of the Bank of Honolulu, and A. W. T. Bottomley of Bishop & Company.

garia and Turkey. This is fully obtained.

"The operation of the troops under Gen. von Mackensen's command began on October 6. Then Gen. von Koebe's Austro-Hungarian army, reinforced by Germans, started to cross the rivers Drina and Sava and Gen. Galtwitz's army, began to cross the Danube near Semendria and Ram-bazias. The Bulgarians started on October 14, when Gen. Boyadoff advanced against the line from Negotin to Ploet, and a second Bulgarian army, under Gen. Teodorov started in the direction of Skopje and Velea.

"Since then the allied Teuton armies crossed the Danube in a short time, although this great enterprise was assailed in the face of the enemy and the untimely outbreak of a dangerous storm. The enemy's frontier fortresses were taken, the Brandenburg reserve army corps and the eighth Austro-Hungarian army corps distinguished themselves at the taking of Belgrade, and Zaycar, Knyaf, Vao and Ploet were conquered by the Bulgarian allies.

"Besides this, the Allies (Teuton-Bulgarian) armies were victorious against the tenacious and brave enemy, who were used to war and assisted by the special nature of the country where the campaigns were being carried on.

"Our advancing armies were never stopped, neither by bottomless roads, nor impassable mountains, which were covered with deep snow, nor lack of shelter nor difficulties of communication with the rear forces.

"More than 100,000 Serbians were captured, which is nearly half of the Serbian army.

"It is impossible to estimate the other Serbian losses, in engagements or by desertion. Enormous quantities of cannon were taken, among which are heavy guns and an amount of war material which it is impossible to estimate.

"The German losses were moderate, although of course, regrettable in themselves. The German armies never suffered from disease."

"On the west front, in the Neuville district between Arras and Lens, the Germans after successful blasting, occupied the hole made, taking several prisoners. In several places on the west front there is hand-grenade and mine-throwing and the enemy's artillery has engaged in active artillery exchanges, including the Champagne and Argonne district.

"On the east front Gen. von Hindenberg's army is near Buschof. Southwest of Jacobstadiet an enemy aeroplane was shot down and fell between the German and Russian lines. It was carried off in the night by a German patrol. Russian attacks northwest of Baronovitchi have been repulsed."
